Outdoors: 7 things to watch for in 2018

By Benjamin Spillman, Reno Gazette-Journal

It’s a new year and by now, hopefully, you’ve ushered the relatives out the door and taken down the holiday décor.

Now it’s time to look ahead to 2018 and think about things to come.

We’re not in the prediction business because, as anyone who lived through 2016 and 2017 can tell you, predicting things is rough business.

But we can take a look at the landscape and anticipate what will be hot outdoors and environment issues in 2018 and explain why they’re important to all of us.
