List of reported victims at SLT child care center grows

More children have come forward alleging they were sexually assaulted at a South Lake Tahoe child care facility.

Since David Rodriguez-Flores' arrest on June 20 police officers said more victims have been identified. How many has not been released. Nor have their ages or genders. Police said the new information points to "a pattern of abuse dating back at least two years."

The initial charge pertained to what police described as an "on-going possible child sexual assault that had occurred at the Pequenos Rascals Learning Center located at 3336 Sandy Way."

The California Department of Social Services' Community Care Licensing Division has closed the facility.

The SLTPD is requesting anyone who has concerns that their child may be a victim to contact SLTPD at 530.542.6100.
